FOREWORD

In compiling this list of Canadian-built square-rigged sailing ships, the author has endeavoured to set down a full record of Canada's accomplishments in wooden shipbuilding during the age of sail. Apart from the hope that it will be of some value to the archivist, the author believes that it will aid the collector of nautical paintings, prints, photographs and marine memorabilia in identifying his items as well as affording a source of basic information for the historian.

The list has been confined mainly to square-rigged vessels of 500 tons and over. In a few instances this limit has been waived, particularly in the case of vessels built prior to 1840. Up to that date, the details regarding the largest square-rigged vessels built since 1786 have been entered, as but very few craft were constructed during that period to register more than 500 tons.

It may be superfluous to emphasize the fact that no steam-propelled vessels or schooners or wooden vessels built elsewhere than in Canada are included in this list. The vast fleet of small ships, barques, barquentines, brigs and brigantines built in British North America during the days of wooden hulls have been omitted unless they measured 500 tons and over, except in the case aforementioned. Even with these restrictions, approximately 3700 vessels have been recorded in this volume. From this, an idea may be gained of the magnitude of Canada's marine construction during the Golden Age of Sail.

The basis of the work of compilation has been the Shipping Registers of the various ports, now stored in the Canadian Archives, Ottawa. The information thus obtained has been considerably augmented by the records of Lloyd's Register, the American Shipmasters' Association, the American Bureau of Shipping, American Lloyd's and the Bureau Veritas. J. Murray Lawson's "Yarmouth Shipping," Narcisse Rosa's "List of Quebec Ships" and data from unofficial and private sources have played a large part in the compilation.

While each item has been checked, as far as is possible, to ensure its correctness, yet errors are bound to creep in. It is also possible that some few vessels have been overlooked and not listed. Dimensions, tonnage and rig have been found to differ in the registry records of one ship. A barque may have been originally rigged as a ship, while re-measurement, alterations, or the employment of old or new measurement rules have materially affected tonnage and dimensions. Ports of registry and ownerships were often changed, and a vessel may bear one name in the original registry book and acquire another soon after launching when transferred to another port. A certain laxity was found in recording the builder's name in many official records. Sometimes it was the foreman builder who was credited; in other cases it was a contractor who had the work done by a shipbuilder, and instances were found in which a shipyard was borrowed for the work and the owner of the yard credited with the job. Many of these errors in official records have been corrected by the author from reliable private information.

Against the name of each vessel, wherever possible, the author has entered certain remarks pertaining to her ownership, employment and final end. Ships built in Canada and engaged in the Australian and New Zealand emigrant trade of the 'fifties and 'sixties have been thus listed. Vessels owned and operated by the more important Canadian ownerships are designated together with their Canadian ports of registry. Most of the craft recorded herein held Canadian registries when launched, but these were transferred to British or other ports when the vessel was sold shortly afterwards. Hundreds of ships were built to be sold in Great Britain, and many played important rôles in the history of British shipping. In this list, the Canadian port of registry has only been placed against vessels that were owned wholly or partly in Canada and accounted as being of the Canadian merchant marine.

As the vast majority of British North American ships were constructed of what is called "soft wood" timber—spruce, tamarac or hackmatack, pine, etc.—and a goodly number of mixed woods, both soft and hard, the vessels that were constructed wholly of "hard wood" are thus designated in this list. Similarly, most of the vessels were of full models, but where a ship was of "sharp" or "medium" model, it has thus been recorded. The date wherein a vessel is recorded with a change of name or flag is not to be taken as the year of transfer, but merely as a year when the ship was known to be under another flag or name.

It is a source of gratification to the author that he has been able, through the assistance of many friends, to reproduce herein a splendid collection of photographs, paintings and drawings of Canadian-built vessels. From all parts of the world these pictures have been gathered, and many are scarce and valuable. They lend colour to cold facts and will serve to visualize the handiwork of long-gone craftsmen, as well as picture, to a generation that knows them not, the splendid fabrics of wood and canvas, rope and metal, that braved the watery wastes, wove the strands of commerce, and helped to build a greater empire than has been.

CANADIAN PORTS OF REGISTRY

ENTERED after the names of many of the vessels in this List are symbols denoting the Canadian port at which the vessel was registered. These craft were invariably owned in Canada and made up a merchant marine distinct from that of Great Britain though flying the Red Ensign of the mother country. Following are the symbols and brief particulars of the places where the ships were registered. In most cases the vessels were built in or near the registry ports.

A — Amherst, Nova Scotia. Town, 8000 population, at extreme head of the Bay of Fundy and Chignecto Bay. Ships were built at the following places in the vicinity: Wallace, Maccan, Pugwash, Port Elgin.

AR — Annapolis Royal, Nova Scotia. Town, 1110 population, on Annapolis River at head of Annapolis Basin, an arm of the Bay of Fundy, S.W. part of Nova Scotia. Near-by shipbuilding centres were Granville, Clementsport, Bridgetown, Parker's Cove, Young's Cove.

B — Bridgewater, Nova Scotia. Town, 3900 population, on La Have River, S.E. part of Nova Scotia.

C — Chatham, New Brunswick. Town, 5000 population, on Miramichi River, which flows into Miramichi Bay, Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Miramichi district sent forth many large ships in the 'fifties and 'sixties, many of which were built at Newcastle, Bathurst, Douglastown, Neguac, Bay du Vin, Escuminac and Loggieville.

CN — Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island. City, 13,000 population, on harbour facing Northumberland Straits, Gulf of St. Lawrence. Capital of the Province of P.E.I. Ships built at Port Hill, Bedeque, Cascumpeque, Hillsborough and Vernon in the province.

D — Digby, Nova Scotia. Town, 1100 population, on Annapolis Basin, an arm of the Bay of Fundy, S.W. part of Nova Scotia. Shipbuilding was carried on in the vicinity at Joggins, Bear River, Deep Brook and Clementsport.

DR Dorchester, New Brunswick. Village on Memramcook River, which empties into Chignecto Bay, head of the Bay of Fundy. Many vessels were built in the vicinity at Albert, Hopewell Cape, Harvey, Alma and Hillsborough.

H Halifax, Nova Scotia. City, 50,000 population, capital of Nova Scotia, on harbour, S.E. part of Nova Scotia. Ships were built at Dartmouth, Bedford, Musquodoboit, Spry Bay and other places in vicinity.

L Liverpool, Nova Scotia. Town, 1900 population, at mouth of River Mersey, S.E. part of Nova Scotia.

LG Lunenburg, Nova Scotia. Town, 6000 population, on Lunenburg Bay, S.E. part of Nova Scotia. Many small craft for fishing and West India trade built in vicinity, a few large vessels at Mahone Bay.

M Maitland, Nova Scotia. Village on Shubenacadie River, which flows into Cobequid Bay at head of Bay of Fundy. Many large ships built in vicinity at Selma, Noel, South Maitland, Walton, etc.

MN Moncton, New Brunswick. City, 11,000 population, on Petitcodiac River, extreme head of Bay of Fundy navigation. Many ships were launched into the river from yards in the vicinity.

P Parrsboro, Nova Scotia. Town, 2700 population, on north shore of Minas Basin, head of Bay of Fundy. Large vessels were built near by at Spencer's Island, Advocate, Economy, Port Greville, Five Islands, Great Village, Londonderry and Apple River.

PU Pictou, Nova Scotia. Town, 4000 population, on harbour facing Northumberland Straits, Gulf of St. Lawrence, N.W. part of Nova Scotia. Many large vessels were built in vicinity at River John, Tatamagouche and Merigomish.

Q Quebec, Quebec. City, 80,000 population, capital of Quebec Province, on River St. Lawrence. A large shipbuilding centre with yards in the city limits and near by at Levis, Isle of Orleans, Wolfe's Cove, etc.

R Richibucto, New Brunswick. Town, 2000 population, on Richibucto River, which flows into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Many large ships were built in vicinity at Buctouche, Cocagne, Rexton and Kouchibouguac.

S Shelburne, Nova Scotia. Town, 1500 population, on Shelburne Harbour, S.E. coast of Nova Scotia. Large ships were built at Jordan, Clyde River, and Barrington in vicinity.

SA St. Andrews, New Brunswick. Town, 1500 population, on St. Croix River facing State of Maine and near entrace to Bay of Fundy.

SJ Saint John, New Brunswick. City, 50,000 population, on mouth of St. John River, north shore of Bay of Fundy. Numerous shipyards in city and near by at Portland, Courtenay Bay, Carleton, Tynemouth, Indiantown, Gardner's Creek. St. John was centre of extensive shipbuilding industry along north shore of Bay of Fundy. St. Martins, Rothesay, Kingston, Hampton, Oromocto, Welsford, Quaco, St. George being shipbuilding ports in vicinity.

SV Sackville, New Brunswick. Town, 4000 population, at extreme head of Bay of Fundy.

T Truro, Nova Scotia. Town, 6500 population, on Cobequid Bay, head of Bay of Fundy. Ships were built in vicinity at Folly Village, Princeport, Londonderry, etc.

W Windsor, Nova Scotia. Town, 4000 population, on junction of Avon and St. Croix Rivers, which flow into Minas Basin, head of Bay of Fundy. A large shipbuilding industry was carried on in vicinity at Hantsport, Horton, Avonport, Kingsport, Canning, Cornwallis, Kempt, Newport, Cheverie, Scot's Bay, etc.

WH Weymouth, Nova Scotia. Town, 1200 population, on Sissiboo River, near St. Mary's Bay, S.W. coast of Nova Scotia.

Y Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. Town, 7000 population, on Yarmouth Sound, S.W. coast of Nova Scotia. Extensive shipbuilding industry in town and vicinity at Tusket, Argyle, Salmon River, Belliveau's Cove, Gros Coques, Church Point, Clare, Meteghan, etc.
